WHY PROFESSIONAL INDEXING MATTERS

One critical component to a successful book is its index. In fact, many people will approach the text first, and possibly only, through the index, to glean the precise information they need. A poor index often determines whether a book is purchased or read. Indeed, many librarians will not consider adopting a book that lacks an index.

In most cases, publishers require authors to provide the index—whether they create it themselves or hire a professional indexer. Unfortunately, many authors don't have time to think about this tool, nor do they realize that indexing a book requires a completely different thought process than writing one. A well-written index follows formatting conventions and rules generally unknown to authors, and the construction of indexes in all their complexity usually necessitates specially designed software. A professionally done index will save the author time and frustration and significantly enhance the value and marketability of the publication.

As a highly skilled, professional indexer with a background in archaeology, anthropology, history, belief systems, material culture, and education, I can create indexes that enhance the value of a publication by providing readers with quick access to its concepts and ideas and to the names of significant people, places, and organizations referenced in the text. Top quality indexes matter to readers, authors, students, reviewers, and publishers. I provide indexes on time and in your preferred format. MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR INDEXING

The American Society for Indexing (ASI) is a national association founded in 1968 to promote excellence in indexing and to increase awareness of the value of well-written and well-designed indexes. ASI serves indexers, librarians, abstractors, editors, publishers, authors, database producers, product developers, technical writers, academic professionals, researchers, readers, and others concerned with indexing. It is the only professional organization in the United States devoted solely to the advancement of indexing, abstracting, and database construction.
